

COLORADO TROPHY ELK

RANCHING FOR WILDLIFE PROPERTIES

We have the privilege of working with a handful of private ranches enrolled in the Colorado Ranching for Wildlife program. This means Guaranteed Landowner Licenses and no one is required to go through the draw.

These ranches get special extended season dates to fit their wildlife management plans. These ranches have an elk season that can run from early September through mid to late January depending on their location and wildlife populations.

This allows us to hunt the individual properties when the elk hunting is best - higher elevation properties with fall elk populations have earlier hunting season dates, and properties with lower elevation winter range properties have November-January season dates.

The Ranching for Wildlife program allocates each ranch a limited number of licenses each year and regulations allow hunters to use any legal weapon of choice (rifle, pistol, muzzleloader, or archery)

Success rates for bull elk on RFW properties are very high. Over the past 15 years our hunters have averaged over 95% harvest/kill success on bull elk, regardless of the season they are hunting!
